is run so that it is FUN for everyone.

This means we want as few rules as possible but everyone needs to follow them.

All children and staff should be treated with respect. This means everybody is important and we should not be unkind; no name calling, bullying or aggression.

When in large groups and to save shouting, the group leader may raise their arm. To show they are ready, children should stop talking, raise their arm and look at the leader.

Children should listen to instructions then follow them to the best of their ability. If they find it difficult they should raise their arm or have a quiet word with a leader.

Fun Stations will operate a 'three strikes and you are out' behaviour system:

- 1 If a child's behaviour is causing concern they will be given a quick, informal and low-key warning by the member of staff.
- 2 If the behaviour persists the child will be given a more directed warning
- 3 If the behaviour persists further, the child will be removed from the situation until the problem can be resolved by the member of staff or, if necessary, the centre manager. (it is likely, at this stage, that a written incident sheet would be completed)

There may be occasions where the three strike system cannot be enforced and earlier staff-intervention is necessary. On these, hopefully rare, occasions the member of staff may be required to remove the child from the situation immediately. In this case a written report will be made and information passed on to parents.

If a child receives a written incident sheet it is an indication that their behaviour is unacceptable to other children and staff.

In extreme cases it may be necessary for parents to be contacted and the child removed from the centre.

If parents have any concerns about their child's behaviour or treatment by a member of staff they should feel free to discuss it with the member of staff. If this cannot be resolved they should approach the centre manager. If this is still not acceptable, parents should contact the Head of Service, Martyn Hargreaves.

Through discussion with parents, Fun Stations would expect to be able to guarantee a high level of behaviour by all its attendees.
